After spending a day in the ruins of the Indus Valley Civilisation, Rajesh and Saloni discover a book in a library. Although it has been written in the ancient language of the Indus Valley, they start to decipher the book. They soon find out that it is the diary of Jantu Rajput, who was the commander of a huge army of the Indus Valley. The story of the book is how he found a city in the middle of the desert, called the city of gold, and how he was defeated by the leader of the city. The movie is a remake of the 2002 movie 'The Mummy: Tomb of the Dragon Emperor' and 'Ancient Aliens' TV Series. The Story The ancient Indus Valley Civilisation, also called as the Harrapan Civilisation, was located in northwestern India. It was founded around 2000 BC and flourished for 1000 years. It was also called as the Golden Age of the Indus Valley. It was a large, powerful, wealthy and technologically advanced civilisation. In 2800 BC, climate change, massive overpopulation, crop failure, heavy flooding and a particularly severe drought created widespread famine. The region was rapidly depopulating and the cities became half-empty, their elaborate buildings crumbling. The city of Harappa and Mohenjo-daro (the Great Indian Desert) were the two biggest cities of the Indus Valley Civilisation and they were destroyed by a flood. After the flood, there was a time of dark. The dark period was called the 'lost civilisation' and it lasted for 300 years. There were no more historical records or accounts of the Indus Valley Civilisation until 2001. In 2001, archaeologists found a set of 7 mummies, the bodies of a deceased woman and 4 children, in a tomb. These mummies were found buried in a dry riverbed. Archaeologists used to work on the mummies, but some of the scientists became fascinated with the life and culture of the people. They were interested in the Indus Valley Civilisation and started to reconstruct its history. Later in 2002, the discoveries became public. Some people didn't believe in these discoveries, and there were a lot of conspiracy theories, claiming that the discoveries were fakes, hoaxes and the result of ancient aliens. The contents of the mummies were unusual and weird. Their facial features and hair colour did not 82157476af
